Hello everyone! We hope the fifth week of the semester is off to a good start. If anything is coming up for you, please come by to speak with Farah Nousheen, our director and also our advisor. We have been helping students with navigating various situations. Our number 1 priority is our students’ wellbeing and success!

We want to give a super loud shoutout and applause to Mohammad for leading the Orientalism reading group and for everyone who has been attending. We have his email below. You can drop in any time on Wednesdays 4–5:30pm.

This week is also exciting because we will have the guest speaker Dr. Vinay Harpalani to talk about Critical Race Theory and his research on the racialization of Asian Americans. If you are coming, please sign up! We need to know how many people to expect. We will also be sending out instructions for people who have signed up.

We have confirmed facilitators for our 3 Language Appreciation Circles for Vietnamese, Hindi/Urdu, and Tagalog. Thanks for all your efforts to make this happen. We will also be starting the circles in the next couple weeks.

Make sure to sign up so that you have a say in meeting times.

Here's what's happening this week:

Thursday, September 22nd, 5–7pm, AAPIRC:
Critical Race Theory Workshop

Sunday, September 25th, 10am–5pm, Veterans' Memorial Park:

Please register for the in person workshop here.
Can’t make it in person? We will also be hosting a webinar to join the workshop virtually. You can access that here. We will also be adding the recording of the webinar to our website, aapirc.unm.edu

Orientalism Week 2

Read our reading group facilitator, Mohammed's, review of the second week. Join us tomorrow for week 3!

Hello All,
Thanks to everyone who was able to attend our second session, and for the productive discussion. We discussed some of Said’s methodology before pinpointing some key factors that distinguish colonialism from other types of conflict. I took some sparse notes during the meeting, which I am attaching here, for those who were unable to attend. This document is editable, so feel free to add your notes from the meeting as well, as well as anything else you might feel helpful for previous or future meetings, such as resources or questions, since this will serve as a collaborative document for all. I am also re-linking my own summaries of the readings here, as a resource, and am attaching the PDF for the text for those who are newly added to the mailing list. For our meeting next Wednesday, we are reading Chapter 1 (pp. 31–49), and please try to come with 1–2 discussion questions that we will try to address as a group, to encourage full participation and to clarify so that we can all be on the same page. Look forward to seeing everyone next week!
